This analysis found an increased capacity to coordinate care among organizations participating in SIM in Minnesota. Future efforts to enhance this capacity could work to demonstrate the value of care coordination with a population health focus, while also targeting organizations that are less developed, encouraging community connections, and prioritizing investments in HIE and data analytics to support care coordination.